Russian Language Ambassadors Polina Dorozhkina and Anna Listova

conducted classes for first-year students of the Centre of Russian Studies, JNU, on the development of complex sounds, linguoculturology and Russian history on the first day of work at Jawaharlal Nehru University. The finale of the meeting was a conversation about a matryoshka doll: students learnt new colours' names in Russian language and created an author's version of a Russian folk toy. The students took part in the activities of our volunteers with great interest and enthusiasm, and after the educational events they expressed hope for further meetings.

Russian Language Ambassador Andrey Klenin, Head of the Department of Strategic Communications at the Pushkin Institute, introduced the audience of the Center for Russian Studies and their teachers the possibilities of getting scholarships in higher education in Russia for foreign citizens. In particular, he spoke about the programs of Rossotrudnichestvo "Education in Russia”, as well as about educational opportunities at the Pushkin Institute.
